INTRODUCTION

A MESSAGE FROM THE MAYOR AND MAYORESS

Welcome to Chipping Norton – a great place to live, work and explore. It is a thriving market town in the shadow of the Rollright Stones situated in the middle of an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty, yet small enough to preserve a real identity with a great sense of community. There's a lot going on; the town has many terrific facilities – the fascinating Theatre, a museum and antique shops plus interesting independent retail outlets and an award winning book shop, you will also find some well known chain stores. Sport features with a Leisure Centre, the Lido, golf, rugby, soccer and bowls clubs. It has numerous clubs and societies available to all age groups, many run by knowledgeable and enthusiastic volunteers.

Chipping Norton is a perfect base for touring the beautiful North Oxfordshire Cotswolds, surrounding rolling hills and idyllic limestone villages that is beautiful walking and cycling country. There are good bus links to Oxford and Stratford 20 miles away and to the fine heritage of Chastleton House, Broughton Castle, Blenheim Palace and Rousham. Take a lively break in the town itself, choose excellent food and local ales in over twenty pubs and restaurants. Chippy has one of the finest Parish Churches in the County, a mediaeval Guildhall, a fine and active Town Hall, Almshouses, an iconic old tweed mill, quaint back lanes and beautiful Georgian houses. We like living here and hope you'll come and discover it for yourself as a place suited to everyone's needs and interests.

This short guide will help you explore the town and surrounding countryside be you a resident, a visitor or coming to work or live here. Enjoy your visit and come again!

CHIPPING NORTON TOWN COUNCIL

By a medieval charter of 1606 Chipping Norton became a town and the chairman of the council is still known as a Mayor. Its statutory powers are identical to those of a Parish.

Parish councils in England and Wales provide the third, but independent level, of local government, below county and district councils. Town councils were first established by the Local Government Act of 1894 and current powers are based, in the main, in the Local Government Act of 1972. Today they are responsible for managing parish funds and providing local amenities such as monuments, playing fields, footpaths and churchyards, although they should not be confused with parochial church councils, which are directly concerned with church matters. Town councils may impose a limited local rate, or precept, which is collected on their behalf by the district council as part of the Council Tax. They also administer 2 local charities.

Town councillors have to live, work, occupy or own land within a 3 mile radius of their town and are elected every four years. All are volunteers receive no pay for their service. The only paid staff are the administrators including the Town Clerk, who deals with all the administrative matters and acts as an adviser to the councillors. The clerk is not allowed to vote at meetings, but is empowered to make certain decisions on the councillors' behalf, and provides a vital link between the town council and other agencies or public bodies.

Town councils are publicly accountable and parishioners are entitled to attend all meetings, although there are some confidential matters which may be discussed by councillors in camera. Of all local government bodies, it is parish/town councils which are closest to the electorate and, therefore, have the greatest interest in local concerns. Because the councillors live in their parish they are close to what goes on and should be able to find out about the things that really matter to parishioners. Although they have no power over district or county council decisions on issues such as planning, traffic problems or local public transport, they are able to pass on their opinions and these can sometimes influence the decision makers at a higher level.

HISTORY OF CHIPPING NORTON

“Chipping” means a market and in the middle ages people came to buy and sell at the markets and fairs that gave Chipping Norton its name. The town has grown outwards around the original mediaeval Market Square. There is still a weekly market every Wednesday and the “Mop Fair” (once a hiring fair for servants) in September.

Chippy began as a few houses with a church and a castle at the bottom of the hill. Only the earthworks of the castle remain but the church is now a fine example of a “wool church”, enlarged by local merchants who grew rich on the profits of the Cotswold wool trade.

To promote increased trade, a new market place was laid out in about 1205 surrounded by the houses and shops of the wealthier inhabitants, and this formed a new town centre higher up the hillside – where it still is today.

In later centuries sheep farming was largely replaced by arable, but agriculture remained important in this part of the Oxfordshire Cotswolds. Around the market place many of the original houses were rebuilt in the 18th century with fashionable “Georgian” fronts, which are still an impressive sight when you look along the High Street above the modern shops. Earlier styles remain in New Street – which is actually very old! Travellers have always stopped in Chipping Norton and there were plenty of hotels and inns to cater for them. In Victorian times William Bliss built his spectacular tweed mill. There was a brewery, a glove making factory, a tannery and an iron foundry and the town grew in size. Today this old Cotswold stone town is a flourishing centre with a strong sense of community, proud of its past but not living in it.

The Guildhall

A much altered building, but notice some 15th century windows and a doorway.

This was once the headquarters of a guild merchants founded about 1450. From their guildhall they controlled the market. Later it belonged to the corporation of Chipping Norton, set up by royal charter in 1607. Now it houses the Town Clerk, visitor information Centre and a District Council Office.

The Town Hall

Built in 1842 as a demonstration of civic pride. It was designed by George Repton in classical style, but has open arches at the lower level like a traditional market hall. These were later filled in with windows to provide a lower hall. This fine building is still the focus for the civic life of the community.

The Almshouses

Provided by Henry Cornish in 1964 as a charity for eight poor widows of the town "of godly behaviour and conservation". Cornish was a lading citizen but was prosecuted by the Royalists during the civic war for his Puritan beliefs. The original eight tiny cottages were converted to four in the 1950s without spoiling the appearance of the building. (why does it have nine chimneys:)

St Mary's Church

This has been the parish church of Chipping Norton for almost a thousand years. It has been altered and enlarged many times, most notably in the 15th century when wool merchants paid for the rebuilding in the new "perpendicular" style. Some of their memorial brasses can be seen in the north aisle. (A guide book is available at the church)

NOTABLE PEOPLE

James Hind was born in the town in 1616. He was a notorious highwayman in the area, executed for high treason in 1652.

In the 1850s, Charles Stewart Parnell from Ireland was sent to school in the town. He later became an MP and in the 1880s he led the Irish Home Rule League, which he renamed the Irish Parliamentary Party.

The artist Conroy Maddox lived with his parents at the Blue Boar pub in the town centre from 1929–33. He used one of the bedrooms as a studio and later became Britain's leading surrealist.

The World record-holding ocean rower, Janice Meek, lived for many years in Chipping Norton. She was the first female Chairman of the Chipping Norton Chamber of Commerce, served on the town council and served for a year as Mayor.

The British School building at 28/30 New Street, formerly home to Chipping Norton Recording Studios.

The actors Rachel Ward and Wentworth Miller were born in Chipping Norton.

The Who drummer Keith Moon once owned the Crown and Cushion Hotel in High Street. Comedian and actor Ronnie Barker ran the Emporium antique shop in Chipping Norton after his retirement from show business in 1987.

Between 1972 and 1999, Chipping Norton Recording Studios existed in the old British School on New Street. "Baker Street" by Gerry Rafferty, "In The Army Now" by Status Quo, "Too Shy" by Kagagoogoo, "I Should Have Known Better" by Jim Diamond, "Perfect" by Fairground Attraction, "I Just Died In Your Arms Tonight" by Cutting Crew and "Bye Bye Baby" by the Bay City Rollers were all recorded in this internationally acclaimed studio. Duran Duran, Marianne Faithfull, Wet Wet Wet, Jeff Beck, Barbara Dickson, Alison Moyet and Radiohead were also clients.

Rebekah Brooks, former editor of The Sun newspaper and former chief executive of News International, currently lives in Chipping Norton as does historian Dominic Sandbrook. Television presenter Jeremy Clarkson currently lives just outside the town.

Henry Cornish Care Centre

TRUST IN CARE

Registered Charity Number 1048355

Henry Cornish Care Centre is a purpose built care facility, situated adjacent to the Chipping Norton War Memorial Community Hospital Outpatient Unit on the outskirts of the town. The Care Centre offers high quality person centred care to older people of any background, irrespective of race or religion.

There are 36 residential care bedrooms, each of which is spacious, for single occupancy and has full en suite facilities. In addition, there is a 14 bed Intermediate Care Unit providing rehabilitative care, where each patient also has their own en suite bedroom. Communal areas include a bar/shop and hairdressing salon, as well as sitting, dining and recreational areas.

Our friendly, well trained and experienced staff encourage each resident to lead as independent and fulfilling a lifestyle as they are able. Our dedicated Activities Co-ordinator facilitates a wide range of activities, social outings, pastimes and hobbies, according to residents' preferences.

For prospective resident enquiries, call 0800 988 8133
